The harvesting and moving of the great peach crop in the famous Brandsville-Koshkonong district is now on. The Frisco railroad, which is doing everything in its power to prevent any loss to the growers by delay in transportation, for some time has been assembling refrigerator cars for use in hastening the luscious fruit to the waiting markets, and sidings for more than 100 miles from the peach center were used to hold the cars ready for the shippers. Several cars being on the tracks at Mansfield. During the height of the harvest shipments are so heavy that several trains daily are required to handle the output from the Brandsville and Koshkonong orchards.
